A BYU student was hospitalized and later released from Utah Valley Regional Medical Center Monday morning after his motorcycle collided with an automobile near the entrance to BYU's parking lot number 3 — the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center parking lot.

Kanting Fung, a 26-year-old sophomore majoring in electrical engineering, was traveling southbound on East Campus Dr. at approximately 9 a.m. when his 1985 Honda motorcycle collided with a 1985 Chrysler Lebaron. The car was driven by Sandra Linebarger, of 21961 S. Nanihwa Dr., Salt Lake City.

Dan Evans, University Police director of crime prevention, said Linebarger was not hospitalized and sustained damages to her car were estimated at $50. He said Fung's motorcycle received approximately $200 worth of damage.

Rafe Homan, a sophomore from Denton, Texas, majoring in geography, was approximately 20 feet from the accident and was the first to assist Fung before paramedics arrived.

Joint mission to Mars as risks, panel says

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Joint missions to Mars by the United States and the Soviet Union are too risky now, a panel said Monday. It recommended instead that the two nations follow "a successful path" of coordinated, but independent exploration.

The United States and USSR have no prior experience with the degree of cooperation necessary to carry out a technical project of this complexity or magnitude," said a committee of the National Research Council.

The committee said it was concerned "about relying on the consistency of the relationship over a period of a decade or more into the future."

The United States and the Soviets have cooperated in space in the past, most notably in 1975 when three Apollo astronauts joined their spacecraft with a Soviet Soyuz and exchanged bear hugs in orbit with two Soviet cosmonauts.

The committee was commissioned by NASA to look into undertaking missions with international partners using robots to gather rocks and soil from Mars and bring them to Earth for analysis.

The committee concentrated its study on efforts by the United States and the USSR because "they are the two nations presently in a position to take the lead role in a major Mars program."

The committee said it reached conclusions after considering these three goals of U.S. participation with the Soviets in a Mars venture:

- Each country conducting programs independently.
- The cost would be too high, the returns would be less than maximum, U.S. technology would benefit greatly and there would be no additional risk of transferring technology to the Soviets.
- Split responsibilities and joint technical operations.
- A commitment by both nations to a fully cooperative venture ... would have a greater, presumably positive impact on U.S.-Soviet relations than would options involving lesser degrees of interactions and reliance," the committee said. Such a venture would allow the nations to share costs while increasing returns and to take advantage of both nations' space programs.
- A highly coordinated exploration program.
- "The two sides would work together at all stages," said the report. "However, the two sides would conduct their own self-contained and independently designed missions."
- There would be cooperation in analyzing samples and the cost would be cut in half because each side would need to commit to only half of the needed missions, said the committee.
- There is a danger that the cooperation could "deteriorate into a race for Mars," the committee said, but the competition might even be helpful if the schedule is planned and paced properly.
- The National Research Council conducts studies for the government's National Academy of Sciences.

Lithuania asks Kremlin for meeting

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Lithuania asked Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Monday to meet with the republic's president to provide details of Moscow's threatened economic sanctions so that Lithuanians can be prepared.

It would be Gorbachev's first meeting with Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, who was elected after the republic declared itself independent March 11.

In a telegram to the Soviet president, Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimieras Prunskiene said Lithuania wants to explain to its people just what difficulties they might face if they ignore an ultimatum Gorbachev issued Friday.

He gave Lithuania 48 hours to rescind some of its pro-independence laws or face a cutoff of products the Kremlin supplies.

Gorbachev did not say which items would be stopped, but Lithuania is dependent on the Kremlin for such crucial supplies as oil, gas, machinery, raw materials, chemicals and automobiles.

The deadline expired Sunday night with no visible cut in deliveries.

Prunskiene's telegram said broad economic sanctions would damage the Soviet economy, as well as Lithuania's. She suggested the best way to clarify the threat would be in a meeting in Moscow with a Lithuanian delegation, headed by Landsbergis.

Another Lithuanian leader was quoted as saying the republic would be willing to pay hard currency for Soviet goods but would expect Moscow to do the same for items Lithuania exports.

The telegram was sent to Gorbachev after an emergency meeting of the Lithuanian Presidium — the leadership of the legislature — Monday afternoon.

Lithuania receives all its oil and gas from the Soviet Union at prices just a fraction of those on the world market. The small Baltic republic has very little foreign currency to buy fuel from the West.

Some economic sanctions against Lithuania could backfire on the Soviet Union, Kavaliauskas quoted the official as saying. For example:

- If Moscow cut off chemical fertilizers for Lithuania, it would mean less meat and dairy products for the rest of the Soviet Union.
- If a natural gas pipeline were shut down, the Russian district of Kaliningrad, which also relies on the line, would be hurt.
- A cutoff of supplies for the Drob textile mill would disrupt deliveries to a Leningrad factory that employs more than 18,000 people.

Deputy Prime Minister Algirdas Brazauskas told Vilnius Radio that "political decisions" about Gorbachev's ultimatum would be made Tuesday by Lithuania's parliament.

Vilnius, the Lithuanian capital, was quiet Monday as the predominantly Roman Catholic republic celebrated the final day of a three-day Easter weekend.

72,000 honor Mandela in London concert

Associated Press

LONDON — A sellout crowd of 72,000 people danced, sang and chanted "Mandela is free!" at a televised rock concert Monday night honoring Nelson Mandela and his fight to end apartheid in South Africa.

Mandela and his wife, Winnie, arrived at Wembley Stadium about an hour after the concert started, beaming and waving their fists in the air as the crowd cheered. They were joined in the stadium's executive box by Adelaide Tambo, wife of African National Congress President Oliver Tambo. Tambo is recovering from a stroke in Sweden.

The 71-year-old Mandela, deputy president of the ANC, flew to London on Sunday for the concert. It is the first major international event addressed by the black leader since he was released Feb. 11 after 27 years in a South African prison.

Waving their fists in the air and clapping their hands, anti-apartheid supporters and rock 'n' roll fans filled the stadium's wet playing field and most of the stands. A huge banner across the stage read: "The Struggle Is My Life," the title of a book of Mandela's writings and speeches.

There was a brief shower before the concert began but the sun broke through as Britain's top reggae group, Aswad, opened the five-hour concert by leading the crowd in chanting "Mandela is free!"

The lineup also featured Grammy Award-winner Bonnie Raitt, Neil Young, Simple Minds, Soul II Soul, the Neville Brothers, Peter Gabriel, Anita Baker, Tracy Chapman, Miriam Makeba and Oscar-winning actor Denzel Washington.

While Jackson Browne and Johnny Clegg were singing "One Man, One Vote" on stage, Mandela told reporters: "Twenty-seven years ago when I went to jail I had no vote. I have come out and I still have no vote."

He said he came here "in order to speak to the entire world and urge them to maintain pressure and sanctions for dismantling of apartheid."

American civil rights leader Jesse Jackson praised Mandela in remarks to reporters.

"He is in good health. His vision is clear, his objectives are clear and he's gaining world support."

"There will be a billion people watching this. No leader on Earth commands that kind of respect and attention in the world today," Jackson said.

Critics denounce D.C. global warming summit

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Delegates from 17 nations gathered for a White House conference on global warming amid criticism Monday from some participants and environmentalists that the Bush administration isn't dealing with the problem.

Senior administration officials said the United States will call for increased international research on both the science of global warming and the economic implications of the "greenhouse" effect when the two-day conference begins Tuesday.

But as delegates arrived, environmentalists chastised President Bush for not calling for specific actions to ease the global warming problem, including commitments to make specific reductions in greenhouse pollutants.

The Sierra Club, which announced a TV advertising campaign to highlight concerns about global warming, called the White House conference an attempt by the administration to shift the focus of the issue away from the need for pollution controls to a debate over economic considerations.

"It's really a smoke screen for the administration's inaction on global warming," said Daniel Becker of the Sierra Club. "We know enough now to begin acting on to curb global warming today."

Some conference participants also expressed concern about the heavy U.S. focus on more research.

"In spite of remaining uncertainties on some aspects of the issue, an effective response policy must be established now, without any further delay," said a statement issued on behalf of the 12 nations attending from the European Community.

"It's really a smoke screen for the administration's inaction on global warming. We know enough now to begin acting on to curb global warming today."

—Daniel Becker
member of the Sierra Club

Laurnes Jan Brinkhorst, director-general for the environment of the European Community's Council of Ministers, and Padraig Flynn, environmental minister of Ireland, said there was an "urgent need for an effective response policy" while additional research is under way.

Senior administration officials have reiterated in recent days that Bush will offer no new policy proposals to curb the manmade pollution that scientists agree is causing the earth to warm.

Bush, in remarks that will open the conference, was expected instead to focus on the need for additional research to resolve both scientific uncertainties about global warming and establish clearer estimates on economic costs.

The conference, which is being held just days before Sunday's celebration of Earth Day, fulfills a campaign promise Bush made to hold an international conference on global warming early in his presidency.

Representatives to the meeting are senior cabinet-level advisers on economics, science and the environment from 17 nations, including the European community, Japan and Brazil.

Bush advisers said they hoped the conference would, for the first time, give equal weight to economic and environmental issues related to global warming and "ensure the economics will be injected ... into all future international forums" on the subject.

"We hope it will raise the level of debate ... on the science and economics of global change," said Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers and one of the conference co-chairmen.

Johnson says missionary work part of athletics

By PAT BIRKEDAH
Senior Reporter

For 33 years Floyd Johnson has been giving BYU his best. Hired as BYU's first athletic equipment manager, Johnson has dedicated himself to nurturing his vision of the "Y."

Johnson said he chose to come to BYU because he believes in BYU's place as the Lord's university, but in 1957 BYU's athletic department was a long way from his expectations. He said, "When I came here, I was disappointed in the conduct of some of the players who didn't look at the university in the same light I did."

Many of the coaches were not members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, explained Johnson, and many could not be considered pro-LDS.

Johnson has witnessed a change in BYU athletics over the years, and he is happy he was part of the change. Johnson said people now know a BYU coach will be honest and exhibit good sportsmanship.

BYU athletics has also been a fertile ground for converts. Johnson said, "Nearly 80 percent of all non-LDS athletes that play for BYU end up joining the Church, either here or shortly after leaving." Johnson gave some of the credit for the high conversion rate to BYU coaches. "The players date LDS girls who want to be married in the temple," he said.

Johnson started a "speaker's bureau" to give groups an opportunity to be positively influenced by BYU athletes. Johnson said, "I've always had the belief that great things should come of the university."

A father is the most important person in a young person's life until a time comes when another person may become an ideal, he said. If that person is an athlete, Johnson hopes the athlete will be an exemplary person. For 30 years, Johnson has been sending athletes out for fireside chats to give young people a chance to be meet athletes with high ideals.

Sunday there were seven fireside chats by BYU athletes. Johnson said 30 speakers are scheduled at elementary schools between now and May 30. The schools are all in the area because an NCAA rule does not allow the athletes to speak more than 100 miles from their school unless it is for a church meeting.

Johnson said working with the athletes "has been a pleasant, marvelous experience. I don't ever want to leave it. I'm well beyond retirement age but BYU has been good to let me stay, for which I am grateful."

One of the joys "of being around here," said Johnson, "is seeing young men get their mission calls." Randy Reid, Cougar baseball player and son of basketball coach Roger Reid, has received his call to an LDS mission in New Jersey. Basketball starter Mark Durrant has been called to a mission in Kentucky.

BYU athletes who join the Church are described by Johnson as the source of "primary delight." A basketball player from Yugoslavia, Kresimir Cosic, played Cougar ball, setting a WAC record in 1971 for field goal percentage. Johnson said, "Cosic came to learn to play fast-break basketball. He found fast-break religion."

"About two years ago," said Johnson, someone knocked on the door. No one knocks on the equipment room door, they just come on in. I went to the door and there was Tom Holmoe, defensive back for the San Francisco 49ers. "Holmoe played for BYU in the early 1980s.

Johnson said he asked him, "Tom, did you ever get baptized?" and he said, "No, that's why I'm here to talk to you. Tell me what I have to do to be baptized."

Johnson said it was a Wednesday. He asked Holmoe when he was going back to San Francisco and was told Monday. Johnson said, "I told him, you'll be baptized Saturday." Johnson called the fulltime missionaries to arrange the discussions and Holmoe was baptized that Saturday by Holmoe's father-in-law.

One of the biggest baptisms Johnson ever attended was for Jeff Chatman, basketball starter. Chatman asked Johnson to talk at his baptism. Johnson said when he got to the church, there were so many cars in the parking lot that he thought there was a stake conference.

Chatman was baptized by his roommate and confirmed by Coach Ladell Anderson.

As athletics equipment manager for BYU, Johnson has made some innovations that have caught on elsewhere. One was a mesh bag for keeping clothes together in the laundry.

Another innovation kept football players' hip pads where they belonged.

Johnson said of his job at BYU, "It's been my life. I've been here 33 years. Now I have two young guys who do most the work, but I still do basketball. The young men and young women I work with are my life. They're my children."

Top court allows ban of school dances

PURDY, Mo. — The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday let stand a ban on school dances in this Bible Belt town, prompting an opponent to lament a victory "for liars, cheats and hypocrites."

Opponents said they now hoped school officials would voluntarily lift the rule.

The high court without comment rejected arguments that the no-dance rule was religiously motivated and violated the constitutionally required separation of church and state. A federal appeals court in September upheld the ban.

"I'm disappointed by the ruling but I'm not surprised," said attorney William Fleischaker, who represented 21 Purdy High School students and their parents who filed a lawsuit in 1986 seeking to overturn the ban in this Ozarks town. "We knew the odds against us were pretty strong. We had hoped we could get the ear of someone at the Supreme Court and get them to review the situation. Obviously, that didn't happen," he said.

School Superintendent Sheldon Buxton declined to speculate whether the school board would again prohibit all school-sponsored dances or modify or abandon the rule.

School board member Alan Keeling praised the ruling, saying it's best for the board to decide if dances should be held. He said board members were confident they would win the case. Buxton said three dances have been held at the school since 1988.

Supreme Court rejects Gardner's appeal

SALT LAKE CITY — The U.S. Supreme Court Monday refused to hear an appeal from Ronnie Lee Gardner, condemned to die for killing an attorney during a 1985 courthouse shootout.

The justices denied Gardner's bid for a Supreme Court hearing without comment, except for dissenting statements by Justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, who oppose capital punishment under all circumstances.

Gardner, 27, was sentenced to die for gunning down Michael J. Burdell during a botched escape attempt April 2, 1985, at Salt Lake City's Metropolitan Hall of Justice. Police said a girlfriend of Gardner's slipped him a handgun while he was being transported to a hearing on a separate second-degree murder charge stemming from the 1984 slaying of a bartender.

Gardner turned the weapon on two Utah State Prison guards accompanying him and shot Burdell once in the head. Gardner also wounded a bailiff before surrendering to law officers.

Man admits to Huntsman kidnapping

SALT LAKE CITY — Nicholas Hans Byrd has pleaded guilty to charges of aggravated kidnapping and aggravated assault in the 1987 abduction of the son of Utah industrialist Jon Huntsman and the stabbing of an FBI agent.

Byrd, who had contested being charged as an adult in the case, entered the pleas Monday before 3rd District Judge Homer Wilkinson, who scheduled sentencing for June 7.

The kidnapping count carries a minimum mandatory prison sentence of five, 10 or 15 years. Defense attorney Walter F. Bugden Jr. said he expects his 19-year-old client will serve at least five years under the agreement reached with Salt Lake County Attorney David Yocom.

Byrd remains free on a $20,000 property bond.

The aggravated assault charge, a third-degree felony that carries an indeterminate term of zero to five years, was reduced from an original count of second-degree attempted homicide, Bugden said.

Byrd was charged with kidnapping then-16-year-old James Huntsman in December 1987 and demanding $1.1 million in ransom from his father.

Explosion, fire on train in India kills 80

NEW DELHI, India — A leaking gas cylinder exploded in a moving commuter train on Monday and set off a fire that left at least 80 people dead and 65 others wounded, news reports and officials said.

Reporters at the scene said the explosion and fire killed at least 100 people.

Fire swept through two of the train's 16 cars as it traveled near Kurnahar in Bihar state, 500 miles southeast of New Delhi. The fire began at 9:30 a.m.

Firefighters eventually extinguished the blaze, but "The heat was so intense no one dared to enter the train for at least a half-hour after the fire," said S.K. Sharma, the top civil administrator in the region.

Sharma said a cylinder of oxyacetylene gas, used in welding, was found in one of the gutted cars.

"The outer shell of the bogies (cars) was intact, but the inside was terrible," Sharma said in a telephone interview. The Passenger Welfare Association said the train had no emergency brake.

Utah man struck, killed by freight train

ROY — A 34-year-old Roy man was killed by a freight train over the weekend as he walked along the tracks, police said.

Michael Edgar Payne, struck by a 44-car Union Pacific Railroad train about 11:20 a.m. Sunday, was pronounced dead at the scene, said Lt. Kay Hargis.

Union Pacific spokesman John Bromley said the victim apparently made no effort to get off the track as the train approached — despite warning whistles and bells being sounded by the engineer.

Hargis said the train was going 47 mph just prior to impact. It was carrying truck trailers on flat bed cars from North Platte, Neb., to Salt Lake City.

He said the conductor moved to the front of the engine and shouted a warning, but to no avail. Hargis said the victim was not hearing-impaired.

Hargis said Payne lived with his parents, who were at church when the man was killed. The home was about 10 blocks from the accident scene.

Payne was on medication for epilepsy, Hargis said, but the police lieutenant did not know if that might have contributed to his death.

Pediatric group suggests cutting TV viewing in half

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Long-term television viewing is one cause of violent or aggressive behavior in children and contributes substantially to childhood obesity, the American Academy of Pediatrics said Monday.

In its first policy statement on children and television since 1984, the 39,000-member academy called for more involvement by parents and pediatricians in regulating children's viewing, and urged that viewing time be cut in half.

By the time a child today reaches age 70, he or she will have spent approximately seven years watching television, the pediatricians said.

"For some children, the world shown on television becomes the real world," the statement said.

The academy also recommended:

—Intensifying efforts to teach parents and pediatricians about television's influence, and promoting critical viewing among children.

—Parents' limiting children's viewing to one to two hours daily and developing activities such as reading, athletics and hobbies.

—Supporting legislation making broadcast of high-quality children's programming a condition of license renewal and mandating at least one hour per day of educational children's programming.

—Supporting efforts to ban programs that have toys as main characters.

—Portraying sexuality responsi-

—Working to eliminate alcohol ads on television and encouraging extensive counter advertising.

A.C. Nielsen Co. data indicate children ages 2 to 5 watch TV about 25 hours weekly; 6- to 11-year-olds, more than 22 hours weekly; and 12- to 17-year-olds, 23 hours per week, said the policy statement.

"We're asking that parents cut their kids' television viewing in half or more," said Dr. Victor Strasburger of the University of New Mexico School of Medicine. He added that the academy did not recommend a time limit five years ago.

Experts have established a link between heavy television viewing and obesity, he said.

The policy statement credits a 1985 study by Drs. W.H. Dietz and S.L. Gortmaker that appeared in the journal Pediatrics.

Dietz, a member of the academy committee that prepared the policy statement, has done followup research, Strasburger said.

"It could be that television watching is such a sedentary activity," he said in a telephone interview Monday. "It could be because the nutritional messages on television are so terrible. Or it could be that kids usually ... eat while they're watching television. ... It probably is all three."

He said TV still offers "a steady diet of violence," causing some children to believe "that if you're the good guy, violence can be acceptable" to solve some problems.

Crowding is problem for mental facilities

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — There are times overcrowding at the University of Utah's Crisis Intervention Center force tragic decisions. For example, when there is only one bed available for two suicidal people, who do you choose?

That is exactly the choice the school's Psychiatric Crisis Intervention Team had to make recently, said Center Manager Jed Erickson.

"One had jumped through a plate glass window and the other had been found seated in the bathtub at home trying to slit her wrists," Erickson said. "Obviously, both patients needed hospitalization."

"We chose to admit the person who had jumped through the window. We hoped the other was stable enough to go home to her family, but, I am sad and sorry to report, she later committed suicide," he said.

Overcrowding forces such admission decisions to be made on the basis of available space, authorities say.

Despite the recent influx of free-standing psychiatric hospitals in the Salt Lake Valley, Erickson said the Utah State Hospital in Provo and the University Hospital are the only facilities in the area accredited to treat involuntary committed psychiatric patients.

Medicaid isn't authorized to cover the charges of the private hospitals. And according to Erickson, many of them aren't admitting indigent patients who can't pay their bills.

Erickson said when the Provo hospital fills its 300 beds, patients are transferred to the U of U, where there is a long list of patients waiting to be admitted to the state hospital.

"We take as many as we can, but many patients show up in the emergency room, and we have no place to put them," Erickson said. "We can't take them in the front door, if we can't get them out the back door."

Often, the staff has no choice but to release some patients to make room for the more severely ill.

Erickson believes the first solution is to increase the number of beds at the Provo hospital. A minimum of 30 additional beds at the Utah State Hospital at a cost of $125 per day is needed, he said, but that would require a $1.3 million appropriation from the state legislature.

"Part of the need could be filled by an institute for mental disease, a long-term residential facility with a locked door and the philosophy that patients who go there are going to require an extended course of treatment," he added. Erickson said such a facility would be less costly than a hospital but more secure and restrictive.

Crime rate higher in off-campus housing

By JENNIFER JEPSON
Special to the Universe

BYU students living in off-campus housing have a much higher risk of being crime victims, according to a comparison of studies by the University and Provo police departments. The lower crime rate on campus is "due to a completely regulated security program," said University Crime Prevention Officer Dan Evans. The program is called the foreseeable risk system. It protects students through a qualified police officer and on-campus housing crime awareness classes. Evans teaches classes under the title of self-defense, but they are not lectures on karate, mace and knives. Evans's approach is first, making the students aware of available protection, including security guards and emergency phones. Second, he explains the statistics and how students can avoid becoming victims by staying in groups, by staying away from certain areas of campus at night and by keeping windows and doors locked. The purpose is to educate students before serious problems arise," said Evans. This program is just part of off-campus housing, but some housing managers would like it to be.

Janis Vida, co-manager of Campus Plaza, said she would like to see a crime prevention awareness fireside offered to all students at the beginning of each semester.

"It should be a reminder to students, off-campus and on-campus, that they are responsible to avoid becoming victims."

Raintree manager Darrell Christensen said, "We have dead-bolt locks on the doors, but we cannot control their use."

University security guards patrol all on-campus housing 24 hours every day. The guards also secure buildings at night by checking that all doors are locked. A combination of the housing facilities and the University Police Department employ the security guards.

The Provo Police Department, on the other hand, does not have the financial support or staff to provide 24-hour security guards for off-campus housing. Thus, the individual complexes determine security for off-campus housing. The majority of apartment managers questioned said their security was good lighting, dead-bolt locks and night office managers.

For every one burglary in on-campus residences, there are 21 in off-campus residences. In 1989, there were 15 on-campus and 314 off-campus burglaries.

Theft has the highest crime rate for BYU students, but other crimes of assaults, sexual offenses (including rape) and vandalism also have high rates.

The off-campus crimes cannot be targeted to one specific area, said Evans.

Scott Finch of the Provo Police, said, "The crimes depend upon the students staying in one place during a particular semester and whether it is Fall, Winter or Spring/Summer Semester."

Assault, defined as any unlawful attack by one person upon another, reached a high in 1989 during August. Assaults went from 22 cases in December to 48 in August.

Another high for Summer Term 1989 was thefts, which is defined as the unlawful taking of property from the possession of another. The statistics for thefts went from 135 in January to 310 in August.

LeAnn Wells, a freshman from Pocatello, Idaho, majoring in medical technology, said, "Coming from Idaho, I had the viewpoint that BYU would be a perfect haven for Mormon students."

Felice Allen, a freshman from Brigham City majoring in speech pathology, was worried about her decision to move off-campus after a year in Heritage Halls. "It makes me realize how good the security is on-campus, but I still need the change of moving off-campus," Allen said.

Spring Commencement ceremonies announced

By Universe Services

Twenty-four hundred undergraduate students and 428 graduate students are preparing to graduate from BYU on April 26-27 at the University's 115th annual Commencement. An academic procession will begin the Commencement activities at 4:45 p.m. on April 26.

Graduating students, members of the BYU administration, LDS General Authorities, faculty members and other dignitaries will proceed from the Abraham Smoot Building to the Marriott Center, site of the 5:30 p.m. assembly.

Elder Thomas S. Monson, second counselor in the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will conduct and will introduce Commencement speaker Mary Ann Glendon, a Harvard University law professor, who will also receive an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from BYU.

Featured as a representative of the student body will be speaker Dale Joseph Pratt, a Spanish and Portuguese major and one of 26 honors graduates in the spring ceremonies.

Diplomas will be presented to individual graduates Friday. They will begin at 8 a.m. with the College of Fine Arts and Communications in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC; the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences in the Provo LDS Tabernacle; and the Marriott School of Management in the Marriott Center.

Convocations at 10 a.m. will include the College of Engineering and Technology in the Marriott Center; College of Education in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC; College of Nursing in the Joseph Smith Auditorium; and College of Physical Education in the Provo LDS Tabernacle.

Convocations originally scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. have been changed to 2:30 p.m. to accommodate those who plan to attend a graduation brunch at noon. Colleges with convocations at the new time are the College of Family, Home and Social Sciences in the Marriott Center; the College of Humanities in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC; and the J. Reuben Clark Law School in the Provo LDS Tabernacle.

Visualization helps women succeed in their fields, says expert

By SUZANNE CROWE
Universe Staff Writer

College women may underestimate the value of visualization in their pursuit of success in a chosen field, said a BYU communications research professor.

After studying over 600 successful women broadcasters, Kathryn Egan reports that success appears to depend more on the extent to which women actually visualized themselves succeeding than any other type of education or strategy.

Egan said, "Because women are traditionally seen exclusively as caregivers, they must consciously imagine themselves in different roles in order to successfully address the demands that will be placed on them. Because of their many roles, women who seek careers have very complex lives that require a great deal of planning if they are to succeed," she said.

Egan defined "visualization" as imagining, in vivid detail, oneself successfully achieving and living every detail of her goal.

"For college students, truly seeing yourself as someone who is on her way to achieving her goals helps you better recognize opportunities, and effectively prioritize your life," Egan said.

One written report of the study described how Egan conducted extensive, in-depth telephone interviews, asking women executives a series of questions on their approaches to success. Based on the level of career success and strength of their ability to meet its demands, the executives were grouped into categories.

A 'typical' member of Egan's study was a 35-year-old female general manager of a radio or television station who was married or remarried with, perhaps, one or two children.

"Most of the women who defined themselves as successful had seen themselves as doing what they're now doing," Egan said. "One woman said, 'I saw myself carrying a briefcase and getting on airplanes,' and now she does."

"I would say the most important thing for college women to do is to find and associate with people that support their definition of success," Egan said. "Then find out as much about their field as possible and don't be afraid to talk about what they want. The more often one effectively articulates her objectives, the more likely she is to find people who are willing to help her achieve her goals."

Wherever you go this summer, take an Independent Study course and earn university credit.

The benefit of BYU Independent Study is this: It conforms to your own pace and to your own schedule. And you can do it anywhere.

That flexibility gives you the opportunity to combine your education with your surroundings.

For instance, if you are going to be near a cultural center like New York or Los Angeles, take a humanities, English, art history, or theatre and film course.

If you are going to be around historic areas like Boston, Philadelphia, or

Washington D.C., bring along a history or political science course.

If you are working in a business environment, there are a number of courses like marketing, information management, accounting, economics and others that will make your experience more meaningful to you and your employer.

Regardless of your interest and need, taking an Independent Study course in a field environment can give you the opportunity to learn in the midst of unlimited resources and applications.

There are many courses to choose from. All of them will give you full university credit and can put you closer to graduation.

Pick up a FREE Independent Study catalog from the information desk at the Wilkinson Center, the ASB, your advisement center, or from our office at 206 Harman Building. Or, call 378-2868.

Take a course with you this summer wherever you go.

Cyclists compete in weekly criterium

By REBECCA K. ARGYLE
Universe Staff Writer

Some of the best cyclists in the state race in the weekly criterium sponsored by Outdoors Unlimited at the West Stadium Parking Lot.

"These races bring together the best cyclists in the area. We've had a few guys go to nationals," said cyclist Matt Ohran, a senior on the Alpine-Velo team sponsored by the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department.

A criterium race is unique because it's run on a short, less than a mile loop.

It is usually timed and lasts from 40 to 60 laps.

"It's very fast paced. Your heart rate is at 180 the whole time. You use a lot of team tactics," Ohran said.

Every Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. cyclists from BYU, Utah Valley Community College and even local high schools pay $2 to register and collect at the parking lot to race.

"It's almost weird how many top competitors are in Provo. It might be due to their cross training. The mountains are so close," said Jane Edwards, a 24-year-old senior from Billings, Mont. majoring in medical technology.

Edwards has cycled competitively for five years.

In 1988 she took 4th in National competition and went to the Olympic Training Center to try out for the Olympic team.

"It was so scary. I raced against people I idolized," she said.

Some of the country's best cyclists race in the criterium at the West Stadium Parking Lot. The races are popular with fans because the speeds are fast and the track is short.

wards wins road races, mountain bike races and was a member of the winning bicycle polo team last fall. She now rides for Pedali of Salt Lake and races almost every weekend.

"The season is concentrated from April to August. The criterium is really good practice riding in a pack. It trains you in sprints and intervals working different muscles and energy systems other than just endurance," she said.

The criterium's fast pace make it a popular race to watch.

"One time on the last lap I was going for the win and my tire slid out and I went down hard. It took two months for my scabs to heal," Ohran said.

"They're fun to race in because it's the best spectator sport in cycling," said Vint Schoenfeldt, a 24-year-old junior from Olympia, Wash. majoring in exercise physiology.

Schoenfeldt races for Bingham of Salt Lake City and believes that the weekly criterium is an essential part in his training.

"There is a saying in cycling that racing is the best training. That's so true," he said.

Songwriters to perform original works

By KAREN ORTON
Universe Staff Writer

The advanced composition students from the Music Department at BYU will perform their written and produced works during an Advanced Songwriter's Showcase April 17 at 9 p.m. in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

Ron Simpson, coordinator of the songwriter's showcase, said the showcase is a traditional event where songwriters present songs to peers and recording executives.

While the BYU showcase is a make-believe event, it is simulated to be as close to a real-life showcase as possible.

"The purpose of the showcase is to prepare the students to perform in real showcases which will be attended by publishers. Simpson, who is also the artistic director for the Lamanite Generation and the Young Ambassadors, said the Music Department holds three showcases a year, two for beginning and one for advanced students.

The Advanced Songwriter's Showcase features students who have taken enough classes that their writing has become more specialized. "The advanced students have been through the beginners class and have moved on to gain more technical and detailed experience in writing and performing compositions. They are usually sophomores, juniors or seniors," Simpson said.

The students have the option of performing their own songs, playing recordings or having others perform their pieces.

Ninja Turtles called violent

By DAVID D. JENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

In their new movie the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles cut a heavy path through crime in New York City.

The National Coalition on Television Violence went to see the movie and didn't like it at all. The coalition made a list of 107 acts of violence committed by the heroes in the film.

"We're very concerned that the most violent movie in 1990 was only rated PG," said Bryan Sullivan, a coalition spokesperson. "What we'd like to stress is that it is targeted at a young audience."

A public relations employee of New Line Cinema, which produced the film, said the company had no comment for the coalition's complaint. "It's rated PG and is doing very well." The movie grossed $50.9 million within the first ten days after opening, he said. The movie cost $12 million to make.

Matt Alexander, owner of Captain Salamander's Atomic Comics, said the film included many of the story's that first appeared in comic book form in 1984, and included some aspects of the television cartoon series which followed the comic. "The original turtle series was much grimmer. It was for an older audience than the cartoon," he said.

Prehistoric footprints found 150 million-year-old dinosaur tracks in Moab are being studied

Associated Press

MOAB — Footprints in the sand may not seem much like a legacy, unless, of course, those footprints happen to endure 150 million years or so.

Such is the case near Moab where recent discoveries of literally thousands of unique dinosaur footprints near Arches National Park have prompted some scientists to apply normally unscientific descriptions such as "awe-inspiring" and "mind-boggling."

In some places, as many as 2,000 tracks are in a one-acre area; often with a density of 10 tracks per square meter.

Dinosaur tracker Martin Lockley, a University of Colorado geologist, now labels the sites near Moab as "undoubtedly one of the most important areas in the northern part of the Colorado Plateau."

And that has Bureau of Land Management officials looking at ways to protect the tracks — particularly where Jeep trails cut directly across them.

"We're looking for ways to balance public interest in dinosaurs with protection of a non-renewable resource," said BLM archaeologist Julie Howard.

"And that can sometimes be a delicate balance."

Local officials are hoping to capitalize on the worldwide fascination with dinosaurs and, in the process, make Moab a key destination on the "Dinosaur Triangle" tourism promotion linking dinosaur museums, quarries and exhibits in Grand Junction, Vernal and Price.

of than any Dinosaur Triangle destination is dinosaur tracks. In fact, scientists now refer to one 10-mile-long area northwest of Moab as a "mega-tracksite" — one of only three in the nation.

Over the past few years, Lockley and the University of Colorado's Dinosaur Trackers Research Group has focused its attention on the Moab area, documenting scores of previously unknown fossilized animal track sites from many different periods in geologic time.

Child abuse programs lack money

By STEVE TANNER
Universe Staff Writer

Despite a nearly 50 percent increase in child abuse and neglect cases in Utah since 1982, there is no new funding for abuse prevention classes and additional staff to provide counseling.

"The legislature does not believe there is a need for further programs and further help," said Jeanette Hafoka, social worker for the Utah Department of Social Services.

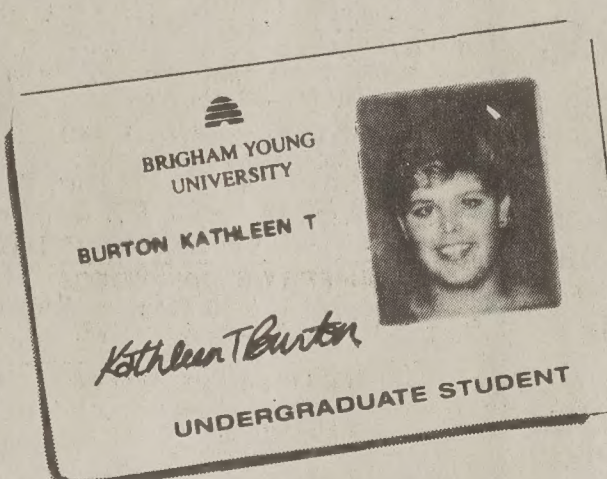

Utah State Representative, Byron Harward, R-Utah County, said there was a significant amount of new money appropriated for the Department of Social Services. However, all of this money was eaten up by meeting federal government priorities — priorities providing no benefit and which are many times a complete waste, he said. "I know of one case where $1 million was spent to make a program meet federal specifications," said Harward. However, the money spent did not benefit a single patient.

The state could provide more programs if it did not have to meet the unnecessary demands of the federal government, he said.

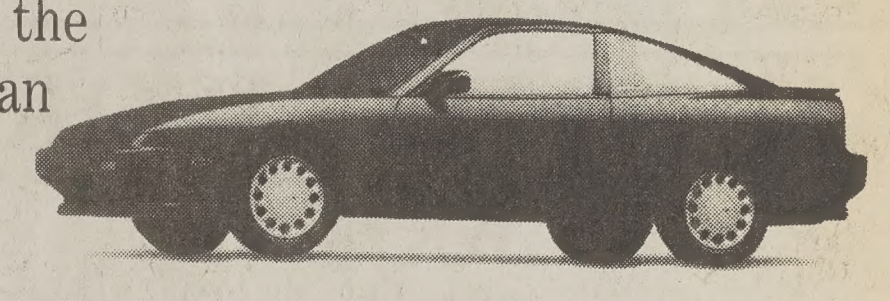

According to the 1989 Child Abuse Register the number of abuse investigations totaled 7,782 last year, compared to 3,161 in 1982. "There is a gap between the public's concern about child abuse and the willingness to support programs that are going to change the behavior of people. People want programs but do not want to pay higher taxes to fund the programs," said Marty Palmer, member of the Primary Children Medical Center's child-protection team. Taxes could be doubled, and even if all the money was given to social programs there would still not be enough money to serve all the programs that have a genuine need, Harward said. State Family Services Director, Barbara Thompson said there are not enough programs and professionals to help families, children and perpetrators to overcome problems. The key to stopping child abuse is offering adequate prevention programs.

Reported rapes in Provo increase

By KENDALL TENNEY
Special to the Universe

The number of rapes reported to Provo City Police has nearly tripled over the last two years, according to police records.

The Provo City Police 1989 Annual Report released in March reported 25 rapes, a 67 percent increase from 15 rapes reported in 1988 and a 178 percent increase from nine reported rapes in 1987.

Provo Chief of Police Swen Nielsen said the statistics do not include many reported date rapes since they don't always fall under the law's definition of rape. "If elements that legally define rape are in place, it's a rape whether or not it occurred in the context of people knowing each other," said Nielsen.

Diane Starks, volunteer coordinator at The Center for Women and Children in Crisis Inc., said one of every three girls raped reports the incident to someone, whether it be a counselor or the police. She said people who have been raped may be afraid to report the incident to the police because of fear or embarrassment.

"It's really hard to know whether the reporting is up or the actual number of rapes is up," Starks said.

According to the FBI's preliminary Uniform Crime Report, Salt Lake City had a 50 percent increase in its number of reported rapes with 138. Nationwide, the number of reported rapes increased by only one percent.

No rapes were reported on BYU campus last year, said Lt. Dan Evans of the University Police.

Nielsen said police are working in a number of ways to impede the further increase of rape in the Provo area. One of these ways is rape prevention seminars for women. He said women often expose themselves to dangerous situations by ignoring obvious rules of prudence.

Starks said the "blitz rape" is not as common as it once was. "Rapists seem to be getting to know the girl before actually raping her. It may happen after one or two dates."

Nielsen said the typical non-date rape occurs in an apartment of girls where no one bothers to lock the door at night. "One of the girls wakes up with a knife at her throat and her life as well as the life of her roommates in danger," he said.

Of the 25 reported rapes in Provo during 1989, nine have been cleared by arrests.

June 9 scheduled as free fishing day

By ERIN NESMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Kids will have an opportunity to fish free on June 9, the nationwide free fishing day, said the fisheries management coordinator for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

"On free fishing day we have a number of volunteer organizations sponsoring fishing clinics," said Bill Bradwisch. Clinics are set up throughout the state to teach the fundamentals of fishing to kids from 5 to 17 years old. Past sponsors include Wildlife Federation Clubs, Bass Federation Clubs and state parks.

It's hard to estimate the number of participants statewide because there are so many small communities involved, said Steve Phillips, information officer for Wildlife Resources. Last year the largest clinic in Salt Lake City was visited by more than 800 children.

"It's a great opportunity to get young people involved in the sport," said Phillips. Wildlife Resources would also like to see older people who have given up fishing start again. "It's kind of a tradition to go fishing with the family," he said.

This is the third year Utah will participate in the event, said Bradwisch. Many of the participants go on to buy fishing licenses, he said. Last year more than 250,000 licenses were sold.

"We look on it as a lifetime sport," said Phillips. Fishing is especially good for kids because it is a wholesome way to spend time. "It's better than video arcades or drugs," said Phillips.

Provo City Parks and Recreation is getting involved by organizing Huck Finn Day. "It's a free special event for the whole family," said Alan Moore, recreation coordinator for Parks and Recreation. The events scheduled include free fishing for kids under 12, a casting contest and prizes for the best costumes of Huck Finn and Becky Thatcher.

Judge delays hearing on order that prohibits Navajo drilling protests

Associated Press

SHIPROCK, N.M. — A Navajo tribal judge on Monday postponed a hearing on a temporary restraining order that prohibits Navajos from interfering with drilling by Chuska Energy Co. in southeastern Utah.

Shiprock District Judge Leonard Hill granted the continuance requested by defense attorney John Chapala of Window Rock, Ariz., who said he needed more time to subpoena records in the case.

Another hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. April 30.

The courtroom was crowded with more than 20 defendants, relatives of Bessie Adakai Morgan, an 81-year-old Navajo healing woman who stood in front of bulldozers near Aneth, Utah, on April 1 in an effort to protect native plants she uses.

Chuska, a Farmington-based company, went to court earlier this month for the temporary restraining order to halt protests at its work sites. The company resumed drilling April 9.

Hill on Monday suggested the Navajo Nation, which owns the land on which Chuska is drilling, could be added as plaintiffs to the case.

Some Navajos who live on the 254,000 acres where seismic studies and drilling are underway, have called for an investigation into Chuska negotiations and compliance with the 1987 operating agreement.

Chuska co-owners Larry Manuelito, a Navajo businessman from Albuquerque, and Houston businessman George Bass, transferred their interests in 1988 to Austra Tex II, which for tax purposes became Double "R" Corp. In a reverse takeover transaction, Chuska stock was transferred to Red Arctic Resources.

Chuska officials contend the operating agreement does not require that the company notify the Navajo Tribal Council when interest in the company is sold. However, some Navajos have contended that one condition of the agreement was that the Navajo Nation would have first buyout rights in the event the company was sold.

THE BUY BACK STORY

1. We are buying back books which instructors have requested as texts for future semesters.
2. We buy back books that are on our list at 60% of the new (not used) price.
3. We resell our used books at 75% of the new price.
4. The books must be the current edition, the correct volume, number, in good condition, etc.
5. If any of your books are not on our list, the reasons are as follows:
 - A. We have not received a written request from the faculty for future classroom use.
 - B. It is an old edition, programmed text, etc.
 - C. In a very few cases, we're overstocked and cannot send the overstock back to the publisher.
 - D. We have bought back the maximum limit based on what the instructors have submitted as their classroom enrollment.

*Current BYU ID required.

*Most stores pay no more than 50% of what you paid for the book. We are one of the very few that offer you 60% of the current new price.

*Nebraska Book Co. will make you an offer on most of the books that we cannot buy back. The price they offer depends on the national resale market.

*We at the Bookstore understand the frustrations of exam week and have made an extra effort to buy back as many books as possible.
